Dear Mr Chairman Ajit Pai,

I am writing you today over the topic of Net Neutrality. I know that by the time you're receiving this letter the vote over Net Neutrality will have passed. I don't think that Net Neutrality should be revoked because you are then allowing these rich companies to trump over the smaller ones. Not having Net Neutrality will result in many minority groups not being able to have a voice. They already don't have a big one as is, so why take away what little they have? I don't think you realize how much people, like me, rely on the freedom of the internet. The people who are wealthy will be just fine without Net Neutrality, whereas people who are from a low income family will not be. They won't be able to pay another monthly fee just to have a reasonable internet connection. I hope you will consider not repealing Net Neutrality because Net Neutrality is what makes the internet fun and it also is what makes the internet be used so often. Without Net Neutrality, many people will feel like their right to freedom of speech is being taken away and in a sense it is.

Best Regards,

Sydney Robles
